Route:

Other departures than Chluismatte (2'644'464/1'119'498/1811 m) are possible but do not go beyond Egga. Follow the route of the E62 national road downhill on the picturesque route of the Napoleonic road which passes Enggiloch with a period residence. Join Egga and visit the chapel, a model of simplicity and piety, before tackling the climb to the Rossbodustafel mountain pasture at 1933 m. The climb is on paths that are sometimes barely marked. Stay aware of your altitude and turn north from the altitude of 2121 m towards Furgghalte. Naturally follow the ridge which leads to the summit overlooking Wyss Bode, a gigantic scree slope before gaining the last meters towards the summit by following the cairns. The surrounding peaks are impressive! The descent is via a steep, stony path following the markings on the ground. At point 2317, head east 180° from the general direction of the ridge. The rest of the descent remains well marked and easily reaches Chluismatte, the starting point.
